Iran – Situation Report

Good day all,

Latest Situation

Attacks on vessels sailing near the Strait of Hormuz continue to be reported, including one on a tanker heading eastbound towards the waterway yesterday, whilst Bahrain was subjected to several rounds of Iranian drone attacks in the early hours of Sunday morning. At the same time, the third US carrier strike force led by the USS Roosevelt arrived in the Middle East region over the weekend and joins the USS George HW Bush and the USS George Washington already on station near the Arabian Gulf. This latest naval deployment comes as President Trump prepares to leave for the APEC summit in Manila, he is also set to join a trilateral summit with his Russian and Chinese counterparts in Shenzhen on Thursday.

Meanwhile Iran's chief negotiator and Parliamentary Speaker, Mohammad Qalibaf, has demanded that Washington accept Tehran's seven conditions for reaching any peace deal and warned that if the US attacked his country again, Iran would attempt to widen the conflict across the region and beyond. "We do not care whether the US chooses the path of negotiations or war. If it accepts our seven reasonable conditions the door to an agreement will be open," Qalibaf was quoted as saying by an Iranian state-run news outlet, adding that "if the Americans make another mistake this time, it will be the capabilities and determination of Iran's Armed Forces that determine the geographical scope of the battlefield, not their wishes or intentions."

All this is keeping tensions high and in turn risks a renewed outbreak of fighting, whilst ongoing diplomatic efforts to find a way to de-escalate these tensions appear to have stalled for now, although we understand that Iran's Foreign Minister is due to visit Pakistan and Oman early this week. On a slightly more positive note the US Secretary of State, Marco Rubio has repeated his opinion that a new war with Iran is unnecessary due to the severe economic pressure the US continues to apply on Tehran, and this view was repeated by the Treasury Secretary, Scott Bessant, who stated during a Fox News interview that he believes Iran was facing one the "fastest economic collapses in history."

However, President Trump continues to send mixed messages over whether he may order new strikes on Iran or not. This was highlighted late last week, when he removed his Vice President from any involvement in the Iran negotiation process, and asked him to focus on investigating democratic states for any possible criminal activities instead. "We don't need a deal with Iran. Those days have long since passed! We've got their money, Hundreds of Billions of Dollars, and we've got their Strait!" Trump stated in a social media post last Thursday. But then later that same day, he opined during a radio interview that he would not hesitate to resume military strikes on Iran should it become necessary.

Marketwise, oil traders appear for now to have partially shrugged off this past weekend's events and are focusing on crude flows. In this regard, the IEA has noted that Iraq's oil production jumped significantly in recent weeks with that country's output reportedly hitting 4.60 mio bpd last month, its highest level since 2019 as it manages to get more of its crude out into the market. During the same period, Saudi Arabia's production reached 10.563 mio bpd which was very close to its pre-war levels. Conversely, the US naval blockade is forcing Tehran to prepare for a possible zero-oil revenue budget, with the energy research house Kpler, calculating late last month that the country's oil stocks held on water have dropped to zero and that its crude export-related income could dry-up completely as soon as mid-December 2026. This chimes with statements from the US Treasury Department, which recently indicated that Iran has not loaded any oil at its main export terminals since late August.
